A GOOD BEAR STORY.

A TEAMSTER'S QUEER ADVENTURE IN INDIAN TERRITORY.

Enocked Over by a Silver Tip Dam and Buried In the Snow-When She Came Back For a Feast, the Larder Was Empty, and the Situation Was Reversed.

Early in the fall of 1880 our regiment was ordered into the field against hos-tile Indians, and about the beginning of October we were encamped on Poplar creek, a tributary emptying into the Missouri from the north, about 60 miles distant from Fort Buford.

Our instructions required us to remain here until further orders should be received, and during these few days that we lay idle in camp the men amused themselves in various ways, but principally by organizing short hunting expeditions into the surre " ing country.

Our chief of tonners was Henry Morgan, a good all round shot and one who had more than once brought down big game by his skill. He started off alone one morning just as a mild blizgard began to fly and openly declared that when he returned he would bring an antelope or a deer back with him, and perhaps both.

We saw him disappear in the direc-tion of Mill creek with his rifle over his shoulder, but the narrative of his subsequent movements is best told by

"I had gone perhaps three miles up the creek, and had as yet seen no signs of any wild animal, when all at once from behind a cottonwood log near a thick bunch of underbrush a long eared cottontail rabbit leaped nimbly into sight, and the next moment my shot

"I hurried over to the spot and was leaning over to examine the animal when I felt a crash as if the whole canyou had exploded, and as I tumbled over in the snow my fast departing senses recognized a huge silver tip bear, whose powerful paw had been the au-thor of my mischief.

"I lay there half stunned and badly bruised, with just enough conscious-

"The old bear nosed and rolled me about, and finally succeeded in pushing and dragging me about 20 feet; then she breathe through the loose pile that covered me I thought it safest to lie still and await the outcome.

"Completing my funeral arrangements, the bear walked about and sniffed a few times suspiciously at the spot; then by the sound of her satisfied snarls and growls growing fainter and less distinct I knew that she was moving enough away, I scrambled out of the shook myself clear of the trash and then looked around for my gun.

"It was lying safe and little damaged near the log where I killed the cottontail, but was somewhat scratched and choked with snow.

"I first cleaned the piece out, placed it in good order and then went back to my involuntary grave, where I found the tracks made by bruin to be quiet distinct and widely separated, showing that the beast had gone off down stream somewhat in a hurry. I suspected the old monster would be back sooner or later; so, rearranging the cavity and restoring the brush and trash as naturally as possible, I retired to a safe position behind the cottonwood log, which had been the scene of my first disactor, and gat down to wait.

"Perhaps three-quarters of an hour had used when far down the open I saw the old mother with her cubs trotting merrily at her heels, making all haste up stream toward my place of conceal ment. I kept as still as death and scarcely breathed, but got my rifle into position and nervously waited until the trio should come within easy range.

"On she came, rolling from side to side, and then I saw that her object was the hole in which I had been so unceremoniously buried. "She hurried to the spot, growled something at the cubs; then all three, oubs and dam, began pawing and scratch ing the brush and trash aside and sending it in a perfect shower behind them. Finally the hole was scooped out clean, and then the old one, evidently comprehending that the promised dinner had escaped, lay back her head and howled

"This was my first opportunity, and 1 fired with careful aim, the lead striking her in the lower part of the neck and causing her to pitch heavily forward. By the time I had placed a bullet in the fore shoulder of the largest cub the dam, with a mighty howl, regained her feet and savagely began to lick the wound of her bleeding offspring. I was perfectly cool now, and realizing that it was a matter of life or death with me I took another aim while the old one was poised on her hind legs mopping her own wound and sent a bullet through her heart. The younger cub got away in the brush before I was ready for it, but the large one, who had already been wounded, I finished with another shot "-Philadelphia Times.

CHANTING PRIESTS.

SERVICE OF SONG NO HEARER CAN EVER FORGET.

An Important Part of the Greek Church of Russis-The Baying, Bull-like Voices of Monks Intoning Prayers For the Caar. A Magnificent Tomb.

the most striking thing that I encountered in my travels in Russia a year ago. Never in any place have I heard music at all like it. More like the cry of some great animal or the moaning of a musical wind it seemed than human tones. Deep, strong, roaring, yet eoft and melodious, it haunted me as no music had ever done. This intoning, which forms so important a part of the Greek church in Russia, is performed by mea who are chosen especially for the tremendous depth of their voices, to be used in intoning alone, not singing. Trained and cultivated into still greater strength and depth, there is in LET THE HUNTER DON GAY COLORS. the whole wide world no human sound like it.

There are only certain parts of the the life of the czar!" Over and over again are these words moaned, sighed and roared, like a varying wind, through the arches and galleries of the splendid churches of the most splendid country of the world.

There is a priest in the Church of St. Saveur in Moscow who was pardoned and brought back from Siberia solely because of the extraordinary depth of the tones of his voice. These great baying, bull-like voices bring to their owners, it is said, a very good income. The last part of the service is always the loudest, and the last words, in a tremendous final roar, are always the petition to save long from death the czar. Unlike the Latin service of the Roman Catholic church, the common people of Russia can understand much of the service of their church, as a part of it is in modern Russian and the rest in old Slavonic. Thus that cry which rings through the churches to save the life of the czar is understood and felt by the humblest subject in

Although this intoning can be heard everywhere in the churches throughout Russia, the best example of it is perhaps in the famous Alexander Nevsky monastery in St. Petersburg. At 4 o'clock every afternoon the priests' chant can be heard there, and no traveler should miss this extraordinary spectacle. In the winter, when the higher classes are in town, there are long lines of elegant conveyances at the door, that have brought the fashionable Russian devotees to hear the monks chant. But at all times of the year it is a resort not only for Russians, but for the strangers from the hotels. The monastery is at the end of the fashionable Nevsky Prosness left to observe what was going on pekt, the Fifth avenue of St. Petersburg. In the green inclosure there are many buildings connected with the monastery, but it was to the chapel where the monks chant the evening pushed me down into a washout of the service that we first directed our steps creek bottom and pawed away until she one afternoon late in June. Far back in had me almost covered with snow, the dimness, in a chancel behind two or claun (children). Sir Walter Scots's brush and other trash. I had now re- altars, was a collection of large, brawny Their long black robes, high black velvet caps and long flowing veils, all of black, magnified their height and their imposing appearance. Their beards were long, and heavy locks of hair hung like thick manes on their shoulders. They were already chanting, when we entered, in those peculiar organlike tones which I found the most impressise thing in Russia. How that strange volume of sound moaned and rose and fell throughout the structure! How it wailed in our ears, like a mighty wind, and always, whether loud or soft, in the saddest, sweetest melody! There were half recitative solos, chanted first by one voice and taken up by the others.

"Lord have mercy!" "Lord grant it!"
they wailed and moaned until it seemed as if the sound would never again leave my ears.

After a time it ceased, and then the procession of towering black robed monks came out into the body of the chapel, leaving but little room for us as we crowded ourselves against the wall. Placing themselves with their backs toward us and their faces toward the altar in a semicircle, they began again their chant, in a different and much louder refrain, "God save long the life of the emperor!" Never shall I forget that semicircle of black monumental figures nor the waves of sound that still vibrated on the air after their voices had ceased. We turned away and walked across the green courtyard, where many rica Russians are buried. All Russians esteem it a saured privilege to be buried in the soil surrounding a monastery. and among those who lie here is the novelist Turgeneff. We traversed numerons cloisters, with now and then the tall, black veiled monks passing us, until we reached the chapel of Alexander Nevsky, the czar monk who lies buried here-buried in such a tomb as no other man ever had, for it is of solid silver, weighing 3,250 pounds. Not only the sarcophagus but the altar near which it stands and also the rails which surround it are of solid silver. A likeness of the great czar, who was also a monk, lies on top under a sheet of solid gold. Diamonds and rubies gleam in the sconces that hang here and there, and the key of Adrianople, framed in jewels, hangs near the silver tomb. Strange mingling of austerity with splendor is this wonderful chapel! In this same monastery are the famous coffers of jewels and gold and gems untold that were brought from Persia on camels backs during the reign of Alexander Nevsky.-Cor. New York Sun.

CURES THE GREAT REMEDY PAINSOF MAN & BEAST

"THE LEAST OF THESE."

She had little of earthly beenty; She had less of earthly lore; She climbed by a path so narrow, Such wearisome burdens bore! And she came with heart a tremblit To the warden at heaven's door.

And said, "There were hearts of heroes."
She said: "There were hands of might
I had only my little children,
That call to me day and night.
I could only soothe their sorrows,
Their childish hearts make light."

And she bowed her head in silence,
And she hid her face in shame,
When, out from a blase of glory,
A form majestic came,
And sweeter than all heaven's music,
Lo, some one called her name!

It Lessens the Chances of Somebody Tal ing a Shot at Him.

"You would naturally think that the service that are thus intoned, such as hunter out for game would wear clothes "Hallelulah," "Lord have mercy," of soft, unobtrusive colors harmonizing "Lord, we pray thee," "Grant this, O with the landscape," said the veteran God," but above all, "Save long, O God, sportsman. > "Of the great army of hunters that each fall range the woods of the Pine Tree State there are few that will not sometimes venture a shot into moving bushes on the chances that the invisible object that rustles them may be a deer. The fool sportsman, who is largely in evidence in the shooting season, will do so every time. If it be a man in the bushes, any striking colors of his cos-tume are apt to catch the eye of the one preparing to fire and prevent the shot being fired.

> "The danger of alarming game by such costume? That is not enough to be taken into account. Everything striking in color is more likely than not to excite their curiosity and draw them toward the hunter if he work with proper slowness and caution. Besides that all the antiered game trust almost wholly to their senses of hearing and smelling to warn them of the approach of danger, and if you can baffle those faculties you need have little fear of their taking alarm from the sight of otch Terms and Customs Everybody knows that the word mas (pronounced in Gaelic machk) means son, so that, for example, MacDonald literally means the son of Donald. But it is not generally known that when a woman is spoken of the highlanders substitute for mac the feminine nich, which means daughter; that the vocative of mac is vichk (we spell phonet ically), which always replaces mac when a person is addressed, and that the nominative plural is michk (sons) ignorance of Gaelic frequently led him into error un poetry and in his novels.

The meaning of the Gaelie word clan, as just stated, is children, and the obedience which clansmen owed to their chief was considered by them rather as the affectionate obedience due by children to a father than as that due by subjects to a ruler. They believed themselves to be all blood relations descended from a common ancestor, of which their chief was the living representa-tive. The clansman who hesitated to save his chief's life at the expense of his own was regarded as a coward who fled from his father's side in the hour of peril. On the other hand, the chief was expected at all times to acknowledge the meanest of his clan as his re-lation and to shake hands with him wherever they might happen to meet. Subordinate to the chief and generally related to him were the chieftains an tacksmen. —London Spectator.

Turning Up the Trousers I doubt not through the ages one in creasing purpose runs, and that is why I have always felt sure that there must be some reason for the "astrornary and ascentrio" behavior of people who turn up the ar ms of their trousers in dry weather. Tue .. . ork exquisites who copied the fashion from London will be disgusted at the vulgar origin of the practice, for I understand that it had its rise in the inventive brains of some bank clerks, who used to go down to the city on those bad old "razor back" buses. They found that their nether garments got frayed by rubbing against the woodwork under the seats until one day one of them exclaimed, "Go to, and let us turn up our trousers." And they did so. And having turned them up it didn't seem worth while to turn them down again, so the custom became crystallized. If only somebody would now inform us why we wear silk hats and have pockets in our coattails which we use, we might even yet be moderately happy.—London Figaro.

It is strange, said a jeweler on Twenty-third street, but women seldom ever consult the official timepiece in the window. A man involuntarily pulls out his watch to set it by the standard time from the United States observatory, and if he passes ten timekeepers in a day would be apt to compare with half of them, but a woman, unless she is very businesslike, wouldn't pull out her watch to regulate it, not if she passed 100 standard timepieces. She is superio to time. -- New York Recorder.

DAWSON'S NARROW ESCAPE.

He Couldn't Be Expelled From a No Work

Bailey Dawson was in danger of being expelled from the Society of Christian Repose. The object of the society, as its name indicates, is to discourage indeavor of any character, and its members, who comprise such well known old residents as Colonel A. M. Babcock, A. N. Kellogg, founder of the newspaper publishing concorn; Frank Parme-lee of the bus line, and others, are men who think they have done their work in life and now only ask for rest. They eet at the Grand Pacific hotel and do not even talk much, preferring to sit in the easy chairs in the rotunda and look at each other.

But last week Colonel Babcock brought a serious charge against Bailey. He said he had gone to work; what is more, he had the evidence to prove it. Things looked really badly for Bailey. The work was no harder than that involved in drawing the pay attached to a political office, but it was work, and he could not deny it. So he took refage in technicalities. Mr. Kellogg was trying the case, and to him Balley made this plea:

"If it pleases the court," he said, "the members of this society must not do any work of any kind?" "They must not," replied Colonel

Babcock sternly. "They should not indulge in any kind of effort? "Certainly not," again interjected

the colonel. "They cannot consistently take action of any description?" "They assuredly cannot."

"Then," said Bailey triumphantly,

I would like to know how they are going to expel a member; that means action." And President Kellogg sus tained him, holding that it would be impossible constitutionally to even take a vote, on the charges. - Chicago Trib-

MONOCLES IN EUROPE.

Their Use Believed to Have Originated In the British Army.

In every capital of Europe the monocle is common enough. It attracts no attention on the street. In a row of men at the theater a considerable proportion are sure to have it. Perhaps half the officers in the German army wear monocles. They are to be seen in abundance at any meeting of the French academy. Even socialist deputies in France are not ashamed to go among their constituents wearing them. A session of the English house of commons glitters with solitary eyeglasses. The single eyeglass is said to have originated among the officers of the British army.

About the beginning of the century an order was issued that army officers should not wear eyeglasses or spectaoles. It was supposed that they gave the wearers an unmilitary appearance. The order caused severe inconvenience to many short sighted officers, and one of invented the single eyeglass. He claimed that, being an eyeglass, its use down the tall grass and make a bed. was no contravention of the order which prohibited spectacles and eyeglasses. It soon became very popular in the army and was afterward adopted. On account probably of this origin the single eyeglass is very generally worn in Europe by army officers.

It is by some thought to give an as pect of determination and ferocity to the wearer, whereas eyeglasses lend an air of feebleness .- New York World.

Lincoln's Views on Assau That night as we walked back to the White House through the grounds between the war department buildings and the house I fancied that I saw in the misty moonlight a man dodging behind one of the trees. My heart for a moment stood still, but as we passed in safety I came to the conclusion that the dodging figure was a creature of the imagination. Nevertheless as I parted from the president at the door of the White House I could not help saying that I thought his going to and fro in the darkness of the night, as it was usually his custom, often alone and unattended. was dangerous recklessness.

That night, in deference to his wife's anxious appeal, he had provided himself with a thick oaken stick. He laughed as he showed me this slight weapon and said, but with some seriousness: "I long ago made up my mind that if anybedy wants to kill me he will do it. If I wore a shirt of mail and kept myself surrounded by a bodyguard, it would be all the same. There are a thousand ways of getting at a man if it is desired that he should be killed. Besides in this case it seems to me the man who would come after me would be just as objectionable to my enemies-if I have any."-Noah Brooks in Century.

Lady Rosebery's Necklace.

Some years ago an old Frenchwoman died in a poor part of Dublin, and her little effects were put up for auction. Among other odds and ends was a necklace of dirty looking green stones, which did not attract much attention. However, a shrewd pair of Jews thought there might be "money in it" and decided on purchasing, clubbing together £5 for the purpose.

On taking it to a well known jeweler he promptly offered £1,500, which sum they refused, and sold the necklace of purest emeralds for £7,000 in London, where Lord Rosebery on his marriage purchased it for something like £20,000. The old Frenchwoman's mother had been attached to the court of France, and the emeralds had once formed part of the crown jewels. - London Answers. The name of Lake Outano was first noted as Skanodairo (beautiful lake). It was also, at various times and by dif-
